EXAMINER'S AMENDMENT

1. An examiner's amendment to the record appears below. Should the changes and/or additions be unacceptable to applicant, an amendment may be filed as provided by 37 CFR 1.312. To ensure consideration of such an amendment, it MUST be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee.

Authorization for this examiner's amendment was given in a telephone interview with Daniel T. McGinnity on June 20, 2007.

The application has been amended as follows:

SEE ATTACHMENT.

2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: The claims are allowable for at least the following reasons: The cited claims detail using a state machine for event correlation wherein the state machine is implemented using a schema which defines state classes and permits the use of a variety of different programming languages by developers wherein a update consumer class object separate from the state machine defines transition operations for the state machine in the particular language of the state machine, in lieu of when the state machine is defined, and such that when an event to which the update consumer has subscribed occurs the transition operations are invoked. All of the prior art at best, details a state machine programmed in a particular type of programming language by a programmer such that transitions of the state machine which are developed at the same time as the state machine, update the state machine by transitioning between states. Some of the references previously cited indicate that the state machine is capable of being implemented in an object oriented language wherein it is well known in the art that subroutines are typically programmed separate from the main program, e.g. each subroutine is implemented in a separate class wherein the main class invokes the separate classes. None of the cited references detail 1) that the state machine is implemented using a schema which defines state classes and permits the use of a variety of different programming languages and 2) the use of an update consumer that defines transition operations for the state machine in the particular language of the state machine in lieu of when the state machine is defined, wherein the transition operations are defined for the state machine separate from the time when the state machine was defined such that when an event to which the update consumer has subscribed occurs. the state machine invokes the update consumer which invokes the transition operations. None of the cited references disclose this type of programming for updating a state machine and how a state machine is created and therefore the claims are allowable over the prior art of record.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
